

Award-Winning Big Spell Returns for the Second Year

Singapore, 25 January 2013 - The award-winning RHB-The Straits Times National Spelling Championship is back for the second consecutive year.

The inaugural spelling competition organised by Singapore's Straits Times and the RHB Banking Group last year clinched a jury commendation in the World Young Reader Prize (Brand category) by the World Association of Newspapers and News Publishers (WAN-IFRA) and also took the top prize for best newspaper event in the 2012 PANPA Awards.

From left: Mr Han Fook Kwang (Managing Editor, English & Malay newspapers division, Singapore Press Holdings), Mr Ivan Fernandez (Associate Editor of Straits Times, Singapore), Dr Tan Bee Geok (Deputy Director of the Gifted Education Branch, Ministry of Education, Singapore) and Mr Johari Muid (Managing Director of RHB Bank Berhad) launching the RHB-The Straits Times National Spelling Championship

This year's preliminary round will kick off on March 9, with more than 1,000 students from about 180 primary schools taking a paper test as a first step to qualify for the zonal rounds and the grand finals of the RHB-The Straits Times National Spelling Championship 2013.

Rich rewards are in store for those who make it to the top. The champion speller will take home $5,000 cash and win for his or her school the Challenge Trophy. The first and second runnersup will win $3,000 and $1,000 in cash respectively.

The contest aims to develop a greater appreciation of the importance of spelling in literacy development among primary school pupils in Singapore and is organised in partnership with the Ministry of Education, Singapore (MOE).

The Big Spell, as the competition is popularly known, will also increase spelling buzz in cyberspace, where the public can test their spelling chops in a suite of spelling games, fuelled by education technology firm iQ-hub.

The competition is also supported by the National Library Board (NLB).

Mr Warren Fernandez, Editor of The Straits Times, said: "The RHB-The Straits Times partnership had a great first year in 2012, and we're happy to collaborate again with our main sponsor a second time. Working with the Ministry of Education to refine the way the game is played has been a great experience too, and we're hoping to raise the bar this year."

Mr Johari Muid, Managing Director of RHB Bank Berhad, a Malaysian bank which is the main sponsor of the Spelling Championship and a co-organiser of Malaysia's Spell-It-Right since 2008, said: "The RHB Banking Group believes in making a difference and that is why we have embarked on this journey to nurture, inspire and empower the younger generation. The RHB-ST National Spelling Championship is just one avenue for us to reach out to as many young minds as we possibly can in the hope that one day these young minds will be able to create positive changes within their community."

The Kuala Lumpur-based RHB has over 200 branches across Malaysia and the region, including seven branches in Singapore.

Dr Tan Bee Geok, Deputy Director of the Gifted Education Branch, Ministry of Education Singapore, said: "We believe that this competition will not only help to develop a wider vocabulary but also a greater awareness of the importance of accuracy in spelling and word use among primary pupils in Singapore."

ST Associate Editor Ivan Fernandez, RHB Bank's Managing Director, Mr Johari Abdul Muid and MOE's Deputy Director, Gifted Education, Dr Tan Bee Geok, were the Guests-of-Honour at the launch of the competition at Lido Theatre in Orchard Road, Singapore.

About 160 students got a taste of what it takes to get through The Big Spell at the launch. Two teams from Tampines North Primary School and Yu Neng Primary School faced off in one of iQhub's spelling games, to kick start the championship.

The students were also treated to a movie, The Lorax, which is based on a book of the same name by famous children's writer Dr Seuss.

The preliminary round of the RHB-The Straits Times National Spelling Championship 2013 will start on March 9. Contestants will sit for a 60-minute written test, where they will spell 50 words read out to them. About 80 of them who clear this first hurdle will take part in the zonal round. The zonal round will take place on April 13. The top spellers who emerge from the zonal championships will meet at the Grand Final, to be held on April 27.

To generate interest in the spelling competition and to prime students for the quest, Little Red Dot, The Straits Times' weekly school magazine for primary school pupils, will run a series of features on interesting words and spelling techniques ahead of the contest.

Ms Serene Goh, Editor of Little Red Dot and IN, a weekly publication for secondary school students, said: "We really want to get more young people spelling this year, and we're excited to have an e-learning game that will let us do that. In addition to watching the making of the second national championship, we'll also get to watch a digital leader board for Singapore's fastest e-speller."

The Straits Times' multimedia news portal RazorTV will also be showcasing video clips of the preliminaries, zonal rounds and grand final, while HOT FM91.3 will run info capsules featuring the word of the day, spelling contests on air and visit shortlisted participating schools for Recess Express, its school outreach segment.

All Primary 4 to 6 pupils of a full school under the Ministry of Education in Singapore or the equivalent can apply to take part in the spelling contest. They must be nominated by their schools, which will register directly with the Ministry of Education, Singapore.

The competition's official website, www.straitstimes.com/bigspell, will feature footage and updates of the competition. It will also house iQ-hub's suite of online games, which are also available via a mobile app. Game participants also stand to win prizes if they chalk up the highest scores on the leaderboard.
